DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS IN THE DSTRICT COURT.

Document That Borrified Even the ourt-The Bywaters Unable to Live Harmoniously-A Heavy Run Cpon Motions and Demurrers-In the Probate Court.

The city and county, against whom Contractor John H. Bowman is prose-cuting a suit for over $50,000, deny that work under the terms of the agreement, was released. In November last, however, he went before the district court and instituted proceedings against the city and county claiming that there was due him $59,542.20 for materials furnished, $5,000 damages for the court of the court of the city and county claiming that there was due him $59,542.20 for materials furnished, $5,000 damages for the county claims and the county claims are contains at the county claims and the county claims are contains and county claims and county claims and county claims are contains and county claims are contained as a county claim of the county claims are contained as a county claim of the county claims are contained as a county claim of the county claims are contained as a county claim of the county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claims are contained as a county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and county claims are contained as a county claim and coun that there was due him $50,542.20 for materials furnished, $5,000 damages for breach of contract. To this the defendants yesterday answered and to emphisize their denial put in two distinct and separate answers. They deny every material allegation contained in the complaint; deny that they were bound by anything but a special contract with the plaintiff; deny as its set up that he was run off the grounds and deny that he was disturbed otherwise than was it the right of the defendants to disturb him.

The case will be put down for trial at the next call of the calendar.

experimented with married life which finally developed a fallure, told her story and was awarded a divorce from John F. Bell who deserted her more than a year ago.

The cross complaint with which Frank Muller had replied to the complaint baunobed by Ella Muller, nee Olsen, was, upon motion of counsel, placed under tock and key and ordered hermetically sealed until such time as the final hearing and the airing of the mismasted twain come on. The deciment is not a salacious one. On the contrary, it reveals to what brutal levels domestic warfare can descend. It does not charge the pretty little woman who seeks her freedom with any departure from paths that are pure, but picks up her physical infirmities to parade them before friends and foe unless, perchance, Judge Merritt should enforce the laws of chitvalry and close the doors upon the case. But there is something indelibly born in a woman's nature which will always prevent her from entering into a thoroughly agreeable social intercourse with the members of her own sex. Women will never band together in a successful social club. The majority of women never seem to be perfectly happy and contented unless they are in the society of men. This rule is subject to exceptions, as all rules are, but it holds good in most cases, strongminded women to the contrary notwith-standing. It is perfectly reasonable that this should be the case, for the chief object of woman's existence is to fascinate man. And how could she fascinate man when bound to a social organization of only women?

the president of one of our principal wall street banks openly declared that he would discount no more mercantile and expostulated as follows: "Mr. President, when a rat gets into my barn, maws into my cat-bin and begins to destroy things generally, if I shut him in his work of destruction goes on; if if give him a chance to escape he avails himself of it, clears out, and the struction of my property ceases." The bank president replied: "Well, I think you are right, my friend. We must give our mercantile friends a chance to get out, and so I will follow your advice and take their paper." The consequence was that no sooner did the other banks hear that their leading wall street bank was discounting mercantile paper than they followed its example and gave the necessary relief to the hard-pressed merchants, and the streath was that things soon righted themselves. All this illustrates the great power of wealth and how cautious capitalists should be in exercising it.
